

The National Weather Service Announces Two Aviation Users Training Seminars on the Big Island

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), National Weather Service in Honolulu cordially invites interested parties to participate in either of two Aviation Users Training Seminars that will be held on the Big Island of Hawaii during the first week of April, 2006.

Speaker: Raymond Tanabe Meteorologist, Aviation Program Leader
Weather Forecast Office Honolulu

Topics: National Weather Service Aviation Products and Services
Basic Weather Patterns in Hawaii
Turbulence around the Hawaiian Islands
The Basics of Weather Radar

April 4th, 2006 6:30 pm to 9:00 pm
Airport Training Room at the Kona International Airport
73-200 Kupipi Street
Kailua-Kona, Hawaii 96740-2645
6:30 pm to 9:00 pm

April 5th, 2006 6:00 pm to 8:00 pm
NOAA National Ocean Service
NW Hawaiian Islands Coral Reef Ecosystems
308 Kamehameha Avenue Suite 203
Hilo, Hi 96720

Seating is limited. To reserve a spot or for more information, RSVP to Raymond Tanabe at w-hfo.aviation@noaa.gov or (808) 973-5277. Please include contact information. Aloha.